DIRECTOR’S REPORT:

Library Director Carolyn Karwoski reported the following:

Director’s Report
September 16, 2015
I am very disturbed about the recent restrictions on our ability to update the library’s collections. I believe that a weeding moratorium is unnecessary, restrictive and hampers the administrative staff’s ability to provide the best library services possible to our community. The goal of collection management in public libraries is to provide exceptional collections of materials in a variety of formats for our users as outlined in our mission statement and is defined by standard, 21st century public library practice. Trends in public library practice is the move to digital collections, e-materials including e-books are extremely popular. So popular in fact, that WLS cannot adequately meet the demand due to budgetary constraints. Print collections are slowly shrinking, so that libraries can provide areas for more computers, meeting space, innovation centers and computer and technology classes. The demand for these services continues to grow. To meet those demands, space as to be reallocated which means that print shelving areas continue to be reduced and librarians are faced with housing those materials that patrons use on a fairly regular basis. The following statement explains why weeding is important. “Weeding is an essential component of library collection management. Weeding is necessary to remain relevant to our users and true to our missions. Most libraries simply do not have unlimited space, and we must continually make room for new materials. Remember – unless your library exists to archive and preserve materials for the ages, we are not in the business of collecting physical things. We collect information and provide access to information. We love books as much as anyone else and sometimes hard decisions have to be made.”

There is an expectation that our public library is held to the highest standards in delivering library services to the community. We have an obligation to make sure that the information available from our library is the best it can possible be, as up-to-date as possible and that erroneous materials that are dated, obsolete, incorrect, inaccurate, and in poor condition are removed from our collections. This process of collection management and evaluation is a process that should be done by librarians on a consistent and regular basis. This means the professional in charge of the collection reads reviews and evaluates those materials purchased for the collection. It also means that when new editions of books are purchased and received, the old edition is pulled from the collection. Librarians also evaluate what is on the shelves; is the item still a valid source, what is the condition of the item, is the binding broken, missing pages, yellowed, written in, highlighted etc. Those items that fall into this category would be removed, accessed for replacement and discarded. This is standard procedure and practice because it keeps library collections valid and current. Books wear out, become obsolete or just need replacement. This process of weeding is an important practice especially in public libraries. It not only keeps everything current it releases space to newer items in the collection. The ability to do collection management takes training, skill and professional knowledge. Some of the parameters for this process is outlined in the CREW manual and discussed on the blog, http://awfullibrarybooks.net/why-weed/. Unfortunately this practice, standard and advocated for by ALA, has not been in use over the past 20 years in any consistent manner by this library. Because this has not been done with any regularity, we are left with a collection that is too large, in some instances in very bad condition, extremely out-of-date, obsolete and that overflows our space.

Space is a problem for our library. We own too many print books, many in very poor condition. We own many print books that are extremely outdated, have been superseded or revised editions currently exist in print. All our professional staff must have the ability to remove these items from the collection. We need to be able to do our jobs and having a moratorium on weeding and discarding ties our hands, inhibits collection management and creates more work in the long run for staff. It also means that our patrons are not being served with excellence and serving our users is the number one priority for this library. Change is difficult, hard to embrace, and in the long run it is much easier to just keep the status quo. However without the changes that are badly needed in library services here, this library will not grow and develop to become the 21st century library that it should be. In fact our library patrons are the big losers in all of this because they are not being provided the best information and current materials as possible.
I suggest a compromise in the weeding issue. Allow us to discard the books in poor or damaged condition, superseded editions and those obsolete materials. This will allow us to create space for all our new books. In turn we will not weed according to last transaction date, which is what we did this past summer. Weeding by last transaction date looks to see when a book was last used by library patrons. Many of our books have not been out in at least 5 years; many have not been used in 20 years. Most public libraries do not retain books that are not being used by their patrons. Also books that are not in use are taking up valuable space, space that is needed for more computers, an innovation space, meeting areas and a whole host of new initiatives that our users want to see but the library needs to create the space to house.

There is a perspective that our library is an extraordinary library because of its storied history as Central Library of Westchester. Or that we are a noted research library. We are not a research library. That is our history dictating our present. We need to leave our history in the past and forge forward to create the 21st century public library that is so needed by our community. This library now, after winning the budget vote, can become an extraordinary library but many changes need to happen for us to realize that designation. In your packets you will find an article that talks about the measurements needed to become a star library, a designation from Library Journal Magazine. There are over 7000 star libraries in the United States, 36 of which are located in New York. Mount Vernon Library is not among this select group of libraries. I have been in some star libraries, here in New York and in Connecticut. They are amazing libraries, well supported by their communities, facilities that are in good repair, brightly lit, comfortable furniture and seating, banks of computers, innovation space, computer classes, many open hours, professional staff and many other programs and services. These libraries are very well used by their patrons, which shows in their statistics and surprisingly not all have big budgets. I urge all of you to read this article and to visit some of these star libraries. Sarasota Springs in New York, Greenwich, Darien and Westport in Connecticut. I would recommend that you look at their book collections, their programs, space for meetings, children’s space and the reference and technology areas. It will give you a very good idea what needs to happen in Mount Vernon to provide that level of service to our users and supporters. Also I have attached a new article, written by White Plains Library Director Brian Kenney, on reference service in libraries. It is very illuminating and I hope you all take the time to read it as it talks about the shrinking reference department in libraries over the past decade.

Attached to this report is also a statistical look at the activity here at Mount Vernon Library compared to our neighboring libraries. It provides a sobering view of the activity at our library. I would like to briefly review the statistics.

In closing, I would ask that the Board of this Library, let the staff do the jobs they are supposed to do, without unbearable rules that hamper our ability to do the job and ultimately hampers and impedes those services needed by the residents of the city. Our goal is to serve our users with authority and excellence. Elaine and I and staff are committed to this working towards this goal as it should be our top priority.

The Library received a donation by Mr. and Mrs. Andre Wallace of a new, smart TV for the children’s library. Staff are very excited by this gift and we know our kids will enjoy using the TV.

The Library has received notification that Westcon Group, Tarrytown, NY will be donating 24 new computers to the library. I have sent a letter to the company acknowledging the gift. We have not received any of the machines as of yet, but should begin to receive the machines in the next few weeks. I was told that 4 computers should be ready to ship shortly. The rest will follow as they are assembled.
